John Nichols wins pitchers duel

Caygeon Comets down Minden Merchants 1-0 in extra inning

The 1977 Tri County League season opener for the Caygeon Comets ended Thursday evening, with the Comets winning 1-0 in an extra inning.

Playing in less than ideal weather conditions, John Nichols of the Comets and Jack Snell of the Minden Merchants, were imbroiled in a tight pitchers duel, through the first seven innings.

In the top of the eighth,

Peter Putnam of the Merchants, lead off with a single to left, then was called out for a lead-off on an attempted steal. John Nichols then went to work and struck out Cliff Burke and Brian Shaw to end the inning.

In the bottom of the inning, Don Thibodeau smashed a line drive to third baseman Larry Kent who was knocked down by the force of the drive. Larry then rushed his throw to first, overthrowing the bag and Thibodeau was on second. This brought up Joe Barria, who had gone down swinging on two previous trips to the plate. This time however he drove a low hard drive past shortstop Kirk Hewitt and now runners were on first and third, nobody out. Barry McGamm came to the plate and grounded to Hewitt at short, who held the runner then through out McGamm. The next batter was Dell Hall. Hall had gone two for three previously and was left stranded on third both times. This time he poked a line-drive to centre to end the game.

John Nichols of the Comets pitched eight complete innings, striking out 10, walked none and gave up three singles.

Jack Snell, for the Merchants, struck out 9, walked none and gave up seven hits, in seven and a third innings. The Merchants next game is 8 p.m. Wednesday, June at the Minden Ball Park against Beaverton. This will

Peewee House league begins Thursday

A brand new House League has formed in Minden for youngsters 8 to 12 years old. The teams will be comprised of both boys and girls and all games will be played on Thursday evening starting at 6:30 p.m. at the new Minden Ball Park. Under the direction of Gene Newell, Neil Burk, Bob Wells and Dick Schell, the teams will play seven inning double headers each Thursday evening. The top 10 - 12 year olds will play exhibition games throughout the summer with Bracebridge, Huntsville etc. and then enter the Ontario Amateur Softball Association (O.A.S.A.) play-offs in July and August. The team sweaters will be supplied to all four teams by the Rotary Club of Minden.

The Kinsmen Club of Minden will be erecting bleachers for the fans in the next week or so. Last week the House League got their first taste of competition when they tangled with Bracebridge in a home and home series. Bracebridge, sporting mostly 12 and 13 year olds, easily downed our lads 20-3 and 10-4.

IGA Ladies blast Haliburton, Gooderham

The 1977 version of the Minden I.G.A. Ladies appear to be very hungry this year for a Championship. They opened the season in Haliburton, destroying their host 21-1. They did most of the damage in this game in the fifth inning as 10 runs crossed the plate. Then on Tuesday evening in Minden at their home opener, the IGA'ers trounced their arch-rivals from Gooderham, 18-13. This was a very big victory for our lasses, because they had a terrible time with the Gooderham girls in 1976.

This win will no doubt give our girls a tremendous amount of confidence. Under the fine coaching of Helen Burk, who herself is one of the finest lady ballplayers in this area, will have the girls up for each game and if these two games are any indication of how strong the I.G.A. Ladies are, a championship for Minden in '77 could become a reality.

be the Merchants home opener, so let's have a big crowd out. The Merchants have a fine team this year and there are some real tough games ahead, if the Cayceon game is any indication of the calibre of ball to be seen.

Only one other game has been played to date and that at Beaverton, where the Fenelon Falls Juniors blasted them 17-3 in the Tri County League opener.

FROM THE LINDSAY AGRICULTURAL OFFICE

TIME TO HAY?

Have you taken a close look at your hay fields this week? If not, we would urge you to do so to-day for two reasons. The first is to check for alfalfa weevil damage. The hot weather we've had recently has helped hatch weevil eggs rapidly, and many alfalfa fields are heavily infested. In addition the dry weather has slowed the growth of the alfalfa plants, thus a lot of damage can occur quickly in your hay field.

Since about 70 per cent of the protein is in alfalfa leaves, you want that protein for your livestock next winter -- NOT to feed bugs now.

If your alfalfa leaves are being severely eaten by weevils, you should cut that field as soon as possible to prevent further loss.

The alternative to cutting your alfalfa now is to spray the field to control the weevil. Five different sprays are recommended: 'Sevin, Malathion, Methoxychlor, Imidan and Fradan. There is a one-day wait after using Sevin before you can cut the crop; the other four sprays have a seven-day waiting period before cutting. Spraying is only recommended if the field has over 50 percent alfalfa in it.

The second reason to check your hay fields is to see the stage of development of your forage plants. The hot, sunny weather during the past couple of weeks has hastened the maturity of many species. In other words, the plants think it is mid to late June because of the heat, and thus are flowering early.

The best time to cut your hay or haylage to get the most feed and the highest quality feed is when the legumes are just starting to flower, and the heads have just emerged on the grasses.

Many hay fields are almost at that stage right now.

Check your hay fields for weevil and stage of maturity to-day--perhaps haying should start on your farm a lot earlier this year.

Ontario consumer advice

Travel industry compensation fund provides redress for travellers

With a thousand-and-one places in the sun and snow to choose from for honeymoons, holidays or what-you-will - and just as many travel agents promising to get you there and back - the Canadian traveller can be forgiven if he sometimes doesn't know which way to go.

Scary newspaper stories about travel agents who sell holidaymakers non-existent seats on aeroplanes, or leave them stranded on foreign shores can make the choice even more difficult, says Ontario's consumer minister Sidney Handleman.

To help ensure pleasant journeys for everyone - or compensation if contracted services are not provided - the Ontario government's consumer and commercial relations ministry and the travel industry worked together on the provisions of the Travel Industry Act.

It protects travellers who have contracted and paid for travel services which did not materialize.

However, as Mr. Handleman has pointed out: "It is still up to the person buying travel services to know how the protection works and to put money in the hands of only those most likely to deliver what they sell."

This, the minister points out, is what the Act does:

1. It requires all travel agents and wholesalers to register with the ministry of consumer and commercial relations and to display their certificates of registration in a prominent place.

2. It requires registered agents to contribute to a compensation fund which reimburses individuals who have paid for, but not received, travel services. (If you deal with an unregistered agent - who is therefore working illegally in Ontario - your claim on the compensation fund will not be honoured.)

3. It may make it possible for a registered agent to provide an alternate vacation if the travel arrangements made for you collapse, because an agent who can prove that the customer has been reimbursed may also claim on the fund.

4. It makes travel agents and travel wholesalers responsible for the truth of their advertising.

According to the consumer minister, this is how you can help yourself:

- Try to find an agent through a recommendation from someone whose judgement you trust.

- Look for the agent's certificate of registration. (This must be displayed in a business office open to the public during normal office hours. Agents are not permitted to operate out of residences.) Report unregistered agents to your local consumer protection bureau immediately.

- Remember that the Ontario Act does not cover agencies outside Ontario.

- When making a booking be sure you understand the payments you will be expected to make. (Enquire if they include, for example, cancellation charges, cables, telephoning.) It is usual for an agent to request a deposit after confirming, to your satisfaction, where, when and how you will go. The deposit may or may not be refundable.

- Ask your agent about insurance protection. Certain policies cover baggage loss, sickness, personal accident, etc. Some may reimburse you, fully or partially, if you are unable to travel because of illness. Be sure you understand exactly what is covered by the insurance you buy.

Further information on how to ensure that your holiday will be a successful one is contained in the booklet "Protecting Your Travel Dollar" available free of charge from: Ontario Consumer, Queen's Park, Toronto.

Belts

Since Ontario introduced seat belt legislation, January 1, 1976, statistics have shown a marked decrease in traffic deaths and injuries. Say the Ontario Provincial Police. Amongst other data revealed, seatbelt useage has now reached a goal of 80 per cent compliance in Ontario comparable with other countries with similar laws.

Police credit seat belt useage as well as lower speed limits for the 16 per cent decrease in traffic fatalities and injuries in 1976 as compared with 1975 figures.

In the first quarter of 1976, active treatment for accident victims was reduced 30 per cent from the previous year while the number of accident victims admitted to hospital decreased by some 22 per cent.

Meanwhile it was found that there was a 40 per cent saving in the cost of treating victims who had been wearing seat belts, compared to those who did not wear them.

The Ontario Provincial Police say that 'never before has any legislation helped us to fulfill our obligations to protect life and property as this has done'.

Finding a better way with ballot boxes and voting rules

during the reign of Edward 7th; the box of the 1950s and 1960s; a military ammunition box modified for emergency use in the 1945 election; and (on top) the present box of lightweight plastic.

Make it simple, make it fair, make it efficient.

That's the approach of the Ontario Election Office to the mechanics of ensuring Ontario's Election Office to the mechanics of ensuring Ontario's approximately 5 million eligible voters get the best chance possible to exercise their franchise on June 9.

Ballots, ballot boxes, forms and voting rules - they are the result of years of trial and error, study and improvement.

'The improvements we've made mean a fairer democratic process, and one more efficient and rational than ever before,' says Roderick Lewis, Ontario's Chief Election Officer.

In Ontario's 31st general election on June 9, it is at the polling place that the voters get a glimpse of this aspect of Ontario's modern election system.

What they see as they cast their ballot, and the rules governing the process, are a long leap from even a generation ago.

For instance:

-a deputy returning officer will put the marked ballot into a box of lightweight plastic, of modern design, and capable of being strip sealed with tape. This compares with the heavy metal ballot boxes used a few years ago that resembled strong-boxes.

-In the voting compartments ensuring complete privacy, the voter will unfold a ballot that is easy to read and understand, simple to mark without spoiling the ballot and fair to all the candidates. That compares with ballots of previous years that could be confusing, and in some cases, unfair to candidates.

-As for rules, voters can use a pencil provided in the compartment or use their own pen or pencil. The vote counts so long as the mark - preferably an 'X' - is made in the circle after one candidate's name. That sounds straightforward and not revolutionary. But it's a leap from the days when the use of a pen would cause rejection of a ballot, and when your mark on the form had to be a 'cross'. If it wasn't a cross of some kind, the vote often was thrown out and not counted.

'The evolution of ballot boxes, ballots and voting rules has been a slow process,' says Mr. Lewis, who is working on his ninth general election.

The present ballot boxes date only from the 1971 election. Prior to that, Ontario relied on borrowed federal boxes plus some of its own.

This was a chancy arrangement, since a federal election could be called for the same period as an Ontario vote.

Mr. Lewis' father - Alex C. Lewis, Chief Election Officer from 1939 to 1954 - discovered just how chancy it was following the Second World War.

When federal and Ontario elections in 1945 almost coincided, Mr. Lewis had to make a rush purchase of military ammunition boxes from Ottawa, had them drilled with ballot slots, rivetted with clasps and equipped with locks. In the late 1960s, the Ontario Election Office was set up on a permanent basis on Lombard Street, in downtown Toronto. For the first time, election material and equipment - including ballot boxes - had adequate storage.

'This made it possible for us to order our own ballot boxes and keep them from election to election, rather than trying to find storage space in the basement of the Parliament Buildings,' Rod Lewis says.

It also eliminated lost and strayed boxes. 'We used to find old boxes in local court houses around the province,' says Mr. Lewis. 'One time, we found 20 of them hidden behind a wall of a municipal building that was being demolished.'

The heavy, safe-like, metal ballot boxes have given way to the present lightweight plastic boxes that can be stacked five together in cartons for shipping and storing.

Ballot boxes, once voting begins on election day, must be secured (locked and sealed) until votes are to be counted and must be secured again for transporting to returning officers for final, official vote counts. The safeguard on the present plastic box is a strip seal that can't peel off without destroying the seal. Workers in each polling place have two sets of seals - one sealing the box during the vote, another to seal it before delivery to the returning officer.

'The traditional metal and lock weren't really necessary for ballot boxes,' Mr. Lewis says. 'They must only be able to stand up to wear and weather, and don't have to look like a burglar-proof safe.'

The ballot, on which voters make their choices from among candidates, has undergone a substantial change too, along with the rules governing what is a 'good' ballot - one that will count in the vote, and what is a 'bad' one - a ballot that is marked improperly and will be rejected during the vote count.

The present ballot lists candidates alphabetically by surname - names numbered one, two, three and so on, to help voters who may be unfamiliar with the language, to find their candidate. Candidates' names are printed so that they all line up on the right, flush against the circles (white circles against a black background) in which the voter makes his mark.

'This design, and all the experimentation that went into it over many years, isn't just a frivolous, fussy matter,' Mr. Lewis points out.

'Voters must make a mark in the circle opposite the candidate of their choice. Before we lined up names flush against the circles, we were getting marks made in the blank space following a short name. The present format is designed to be fair to candidates and of course ensure that the voter actually casts his vote as he intended to do.'

Voters, entering a polling place on election day, are given a ballot - after the deputy returning officer and poll clerk have checked the name on the list of eligible voters. Within a small cardboard voting screen which ensures complete privacy, the voter marks the ballot, preferably with an 'X', hands the folded ballot to the deputy returning officer who drops it in the ballot box.

What happens if you inadvertently mark an 'X' in a circle you didn't intend? The procedure is simple. Take the ballot to the deputy returning officer who will mark it 'cancelled' and give you a new ballot form.
